“A Parent’s Guide: Newborn Hearing Screening”

This 18-minute closed-captioned videotape is ideal for families to view prior to the birth of their babies. It discusses the importance of early identification and screening, and empowers parents with practical information about early communication development, and the hearing screening and follow-up process.

The videotape is being used in Connecticut hospital birthing classes and midwifery practices, and is formatted for use on closed circuit hospital TV channels for new parents to watch prior to the hearing screening.

“A Parent’s Guide: Early Intervention for Infants and Young Children with Hearing Loss”

This 16-minute closed-captioned videotape is designed for families whose infants or young children have been diagnosed with a hearing loss. It promotes a better understanding of the early intervention process, and introduces families to amplification, parent-to-parent support, and various communication options.

Copies of the videotape are loaned to families by audiologists who diagnose the hearing loss. The parent returns the video upon the child’s enrollment in early intervention.
